You can find out more about this program in the comments below. Having a big screen in front of you is awesome but it can also be a problem sometimes! Since most of the content that we use for our web browsing, communications, social media, and many other purposes is designed to be seen in a small screen, having a large screen (and therefore having a big desktop) can mean a lot of wasted space on your screen. Luckily, there are tools that can help! One such tool, Microsoft's Windows

Mobility Center, automatically detects the resolution of your screen and determines what desktop size you can safely have. If you would like to have a larger screen, you can simply click "Scale" in the tool's "System Options" tab and make it larger. If you don't want a larger screen, just click the "Do nothing" button. In Windows 7, the Windows Mobility Center is integrated into the Windows 7 Taskbar. From the taskbar, click the "Start" button or press the Windows logo key+W. From the menu that appears, select "Windows Mobility Center." On the "System Options" tab of the "Windows Mobility Center," the available resolutions and the biggest one will be listed. One of the great things about Windows 7 is the integration between the Windows 7 Taskbar and the Windows Mobility Center. Although a lot of people use a lot of different methods to customize the Windows 7 Taskbar, the Windows Mobility Center provides a few basic options. You can also get to the "System Options" tab from the taskbar's "Tools" menu. 1. Windows Mobility Center enables you to toggle "Show Desktop Icons" and "Show Desktop Icons in the Start Menu" b7e8fdf5c8
